What I Would Need In The Arctic-

The Arctic Circle is technically everything above 66 degrees, 30 minutes North Latitude. However, other definitions rely on the presence of tundra vegetation, distribution of 'Arctic' animals like the walrus, the presence of permafrost, the temperature of the region or even the southern limit of pack ice during the winter. In fact, the Arctic can even be defined as an extremely dry, cold desert. For the purposes of the Arctic Studies Center, we identify the Arctic on the basis of the cultures and peoples as well as animals adapted to Arctic lands and resources.

The screenshot shows the Delicious website interface for a user named 'lee_kolbert'. The top navigation bar includes 'Home', 'Bookmarks', 'People', and 'Tags'. A search bar is located on the right. The main content area displays 'lee_kolbert's Network' with links for 'Bookmarks', 'Network', 'Tags', 'Subscriptions', and 'Inbox (2 new)'. Below this, there are several bookmark entries with dates, titles, and tags. A large orange arrow points from the text 'Add students to your network' to the 'Network' tab in the navigation bar. On the right side, there is a sidebar with a search bar and a list of network members under the heading 'People'. The members list includes 'student_anderson', 'student_harrison', 'Student_kolbert', 'student_magee', 'student_mckinley', 'student_ostrow', 'Student_revland', and 'student_smith'. A legend below the list explains the fan status icons: a single arrow for 'New fan' and a double arrow for 'Mutual fan'. At the bottom right, there is an image of an iPhone.
